Welcome

Welcome to the 2024 2nd year Drawing class of the Department of Visual Art, University of Johannesburg. This Learning Guide is designed to provide all the organisational, academic and visual information and resources you will require for the successful completion of the module. The module scaffolds upon the skills and knowledge gained in your 1st year of study and extends both your technical and conceptual abilities so as to develop a confident body of drawings in preparation for your 3rd year. As such, this year's Drawing module is the ground upon which you will later present yourself for assessment for the awarding of your degree.

Section B: Module information

Module name	DRAWING II (BADR7Y2)
Pre-requisites for module	Drawing I (BADR7Y1)
Module NQF level	6
NQF Credits	24
Duration of module	30 weeks

Purpose of the module

To develop upon the skills obtained during the first year of study so as to produce more formally congruent work with a greater degree of connotative association. You will work through a number of set units where both observation and your own experiences are important. However, the underlying processes and values upon which the module is built is to create opportunities to develop highly imaginative and thoroughly iterated bodies of work by understanding the critical value of committed, disruptive and materially diverse methods of delivering complex ideas and personal areas of interest. These methods and processes result in highly responsive and a compelling body of drawings.

Module outcomes	Module assessment criteria
At the end of this module you should be able to do the following:	You will be assessed as competent if you can
Observe and render a range of stimuli – organic, inorganic objects and conceptual images – and interpret and depict these with confidence. (These skills should indicate a development from the largely technical processes introduced in first year)	- Successfully present the drawing outcome reflecting confidence in rendering, choice of drawing material, point of view and technical accuracy - Show an ability to research independently while being critically aware of diverse products in relation to a concept. - Demonstrate multi-modal approaches to Drawing - Provide evidence of iterative cycles before embarking on the final work
Develop a range of new technical drawing skills – applicable to a selection of perceptual and conceptual themes, in order to depict these as graphic statements on both two & three-dimensional surfaces and forms.	- Apply the formal elements, especially markmaking, at a higher level than expected at 1st year - Demonstrate intermediate technical drawing ability in rendering and presenting visual information coherently, confidently and with high levels of accuracy - Demonstrate coherence of visual parts of a composition
Demonstrate independence in researching and sourcing suitable visual material based on suggested topics / themes. This should be done with a view to the manipulation and alteration of such resource materials in order to construct personal and new imagery in Drawing.	- Present a wide range of media in context - Interpret the subject matter through appropriate expressive means in relation to concepts - Cohere diverse media used in a composition.
Articulate how and why particular choices have been made during class/teaching/crit sessions.	- Conduct extensive personal visual research - Demonstrate quality of work relating to conceptual expertise and research initiatives which enables a student to construct personal & new imagery pertaining to the module - Articulate a conceptual understanding of all elements of a composition.
Demonstrate through discussions with the class and the lecturer, development of a high level of confidence which could apply to a range of visual and conceptual problems related to Drawing.	- Demonstrate confidence in the handling of all visual elements of a composition - Demonstrate an understanding that this confidence is a result of hard work.
Demonstrate an understanding that drawing can relate to other disciplines providing confidence to work individually in third year.	- Show evidence of sound research into personal and cultural positioning of work - Shows understanding of the use of metaphors and symbols.

ASSESSMENT GUIDELINES

The work produced for this year module is assessed in a variety of ways: Continuous informal assessments are integrated into the drawing sessions of each unit as formative assessment opportunities. These take the form of individual and group discussions, comments and critiques (crits).

These formative assessments then help prepare you for the summative assessment opportunities at the end of each unit (see Work Schedule below).

At the summative assessments you are expected to present your work professionally; sloppy presentation will result in you losing marks. ALL iterative visual research, visual journals, studies and initial attempts MUST accompany your final presentation and will be used as a moderation device in order to arrive at a final mark. If no supportive material accompanies your final work, your mark will be moderated down.

There are SEVEN (7) summative assessment opportunities per year for this module.

Semester 1: 4 summative assessments

Semester 2: 3 summative assessments

Two critiques of Semester work take place at the June and November Reviews. ALL work completed for the semester must be presented.

Semester One:

Assessment schedule/opportunities

Portfolio # 1 to be marked at the end of class in week 3

Portfolio # 2 to be marked at the end of class in week 6

Portfolio # 3 to be marked at the end of class in week 12

Portfolio # 4 to be marked at the end of class in week 15

Semester Two:

Assessment schedule/opportunities

Portfolio # 4 to be marked at the end of class in week 18

Portfolio # 5 to be marked at the end of class in week 21

Portfolio # 6 to be marked at the end of class in week 27

No late assignments will be accepted without a valid medical certificate and/or explanatory letter along with the necessary documents.

Supplementary assessments (if necessary) are scheduled as part of the University's assessment plan.

Students will have an opportunity to assess the lecturing staff, module presentation and the teaching and learning experience in the module in the 2nd semester.

NOTE:

Personal feedback on marks awarded occurs in the lesson directly after each summative assessment opportunity. You must bring your drawing(s) to that class for discussion and individual feedback. If no drawing is brought in then no feedback will occur.

Portfolio preparation

The portfolio of selected drawings must be submitted in a simple but professional manner for assessment when the unit ends (see weeks above and dates in the Work Schedule below). The portfolio must exhibit the major drawing(s), hung on a wall without any unsightly masking tape visible. The portfolio will also exhibit the following:

- All associated preparatory drawings and exercises in the visual diary / journal below the exhibited final drawing(s)
- Your name & student number
- A brief, proof-read and typed artist's statement explaining how you have gone about answering the brief.

Section C: Overview – facilitation of learning and assessment

AIMS & DESCRIPTION OF THE MODULE

- The module aims to equip you with skills, knowledge and values associated with the practice of drawing within the wider field of art making and visual culture.
- Units are set to extend the skills and knowledge of drawing processes and materials gained during the first year of study and develop an awareness of drawing as a conceptual part of your wider Visual Art experience.
- The module comprises a number of specific units designed to develop imagination through understanding the critical importance of research and the iterative cycles of concept development. These cycles help you process and rethink your initial ideas so as to produce a mature and nuanced body of work. Finding the most suitable visual presentation of your iterated and nuanced ideas will be completed on a range of two and three dimensional surfaces, in a variety of ways which include accurate rendering as well as expressive mark making. Your ability to turn ideas into researched iterated concepts worthy of depiction is the aim of each module unit.
- The module aims to build both confidence and competence in approaching diverse drawing projects. It develops a broad range of skills, the ability to critique your work and articulate the values of drawing.

STRUCTURE OF THE MODULE

This module provides opportunities in which you are able to demonstrate mastery of a variety of drawing methods, materials and approaches. The units construct a cumulative (scaffolded) learning experience.

These units will enable you to:

- contextualise own experience as viable and meaningful subjects and content
- prioritise a pan-African experience and content wherever possible
- learn how to research topics, source material and extract and manipulate resources so that your drawings inform the viewer of your intent
- understand that 'ideas' are nothing without deep research, development and nuancing through the iterative process and that evidence of this process will form an important part of both your assessment and ultimate success
- confidently present your ideas, research and decisions and defend them
- utilise consultative, brainstorming and communal ideas in the maturation of content

- understand the generative potency of disruption and rupture in, and as, a creative process
- construct and manipulate formal and conceptual relationships between subject and object, figure and ground, motifs and compositional space, between form and content and within various and diverse contexts
- process diverse drawing materials (both traditional and unconventional) in the pursuit of meaning-making
- work from the object directly without the intervention of and reliance on flat, photomechanical or digital reproductions of an object
- contextualise and control concepts which are both naturalistic and expressive in their depiction
- identify the visual and conceptual power of words / texts and images (theatrical, literary and filmic) and be able to draw on and interpret these sources for the purposes of image making
- produce a book-object which exploits both material and concept whilst learning about the rich and complex history and practice of the book arts
- develop technical skills across a range of stimuli and approaches to mark-making
- identify a topic for the final unit, which will help pave the way for the type of research and content which might take place in your third year

The Six Major Learning processes in Drawing for the year

For each Unit of Drawing this year, you will first be presented with the most important elements of the Unit, the Assessment Criteria — what evidence must be evident in your drawing(s) to demonstrate learning — and examples of work from previous years as a guide to the range and diversity possible in the particular Unit. Emphasis is placed on the importance of the conceptual development of your ideas thorough in-depth research, multiple annotated sketches in your A5 journal, a process termed iterative cycles.

Through each iterative cycle, your 'initial idea' is exposed to interrogation, allowing for its relevance, validity, vitality and conceptual gravity to grow and mature. This process provides a meaningful and defensible context within which to work with confidence, allowing you to build content with real meaning. Without such iteration, an 'idea' remains thin, immature, and without nuance.

Any iterative cycle goes through various stages:

First, you will begin a quest to avoid impoverishment: thin and predictable 'ideas' are not useful to you. Instead, you must uncover the potential of these initial concepts, finding fresh and appropriate materials and modes of working. You will begin to understand that, in order to make something with validity and integrity, the matured / iterated idea (4th or 5th version) is usually far more potent and worthy of pursuing than the original un-iterated idea.

Second, through these iterative experiments, a growing body of processed and annotated sketches appear in your A5 journal as possible routes forward. In this manner, your imagination is fired up demonstrating the inventive transformation of your own (or someone else's pre-existing) ideas that you can develop into final drawings! These iterations in your A5 journal avoid preciousness and helps nuance your initial idea, triggering a more imaginative approach to your drawing project including deciding on what materials to work with and on, are most appropriate.

Third, we must actively foster an environment where collective and communal readings of your process drawings, research and iterative cycles, will bring even greater richness to your final work. A collective approach is far more productive, especially at the start of a process. Students often learn just as much from each other than from their tutors.

Fourth, the idea of disruption and rupture of the rote, conservative and safe, is carried out in a positive and generative light, NEVER with a view of belittling or humiliating a student's ideas or processes. Such disruptions and challenges might be done through fracturing, tearing-up, collaging and reconstituting existing work.

Fifth, this process underpins the way in which ALL work for the year might be approached. Evidence of deepened research must become the norm. This cycle avoids visual and conceptual impoverishment and promotes 'having something meaningful to say'.

In order to facilitate deeper learnings in Drawing, TWO 'free Drawing weeks' have been incorporated into the program of work in which aspects of observation, rendering, material manipulation, expression and imaginative interpretation are explored.

PUNCTUALITY, LATENESS AND ABSENCE FROM CLASS:

A MINIMUM OF 80% CLASS ATTENDANCE (WHETHER IN PERSON OR ONLINE) MUST BE ACHIEVED. AS SOON AS YOU ARE ABSENT FOR THE SIXTH (6TH) SESSION OUT OF THE 28 FOR THE YEAR (TAKING YOU OVER 20% OF THE YEAR'S CLASSES), YOU MAY BE EXCLUDED FROM THE DRAWING CLASS AND YOU WILL AUTOMATICALLY FAIL THE MODULE.

See 2024 FADA Rules and Regulations p 16 which states:

AD1.14 Attendance

1.14.1 Long-term illness or overseas visits are not considered valid grounds for exemption from any part of the programme.

1.14.2 A minimum of 80% class attendance, scheduled tutorials and practical classes is required. A legitimate reason, and where appropriate the necessary evidence thereof (a medical certificate or similar), is required to substantiate any nonattendance.

1.14.3 Unsatisfactory participation is taken into consideration when decisions are made regarding the academic exclusion of students.

LEARNING COMPONENT: SEMESTER ONE

LEARNING UNIT ONE

TITLE: SCARECROW- OBSERVATIONAL DRAWING

DURATION: 1 WEEK (5 SESSIONS)

To introduce Unit One, consider the processes discussed in The Six Major Learning processes in Drawing for the year (pp6-7) again.

OVERVIEW OF THE UNIT

The aim of this unit is to reacquaint you with observational drawing made from an object they have constructed. To expand your drawing skills with specific focus on use of line, tone, texture and mark making for expressive outcomes. To develop meaning and content through formal drawing elements with less dependence on literal imagery.

The student is required to build themselves a scarecrow, a structure traditionally employed to scare away birds from young growing crops. Here your personal scarecrow should act as a protector against your own fears and worries, how might you construct an object able to overcome load shedding, road rage, study anxiety, or weight gain? Make a list of what you would like protection from then look for relevant materials that symbolically refer to these outcomes, be inventive and take chances. Keep a sense of playfulness, variety and experimentation in your construction.

MATERIALS

Drawing materials

- Charcoal both compressed and willowstick,
- an eraser, a putty rubber
- some of the drawing materials you explored in your previous year's expressive drawing projects.
- Masking tape or clips to attach paper
- A long stick or rod, dowel stick of straight branch - no less than 40 cm long.
- A blindfold, piece of cloth to tie around your eyes.

Paper

- 5 sheets of A2 cartridge paper to use for the exercises on Monday and Tuesday.
- 2 sheets of A2 better quality paper, Fabriano or Canson paper
- 1 sheet of Fabriano 1.5x1m from a roll for your final drawing
- Drawing work book to make preparatory drawings and develop ideas
- Household, or workshop items, found objects, scavenged goods with which to build yourself a scarecrow.
- A simple armature of wood or wire onto which your figure can safely be built to allow it to stand freely on its own

PROCEDURE

In preparation for the first session:

Construct your scarecrow on a strong and simple armature so that it can stand freely on its own, select materials for its construction that have personal relevance and are linked to the content you wish to explore. This structure is the starting point for all the drawings for the week, so you need to invest time and careful consideration in its construction. Try and avoid being too literal, think metaphorically about your fears and anxieties and what materials/ objects might be used in your construction to protect yourself. Read the links on the ideas behind the notion of a scarecrow

Session one:

Arrive with your finished scarecrow, you will be asked to briefly present it to the group explaining some of your material choices linked to their protective abilities. Day one will spent doing drawing exercises that will be explained in class. Beginning first of finished drawings A2

Session two:

Quick discussion of the A2 finished drawing, which was started the previous day. Work in pairs and produce an interactive relationship between two scarecrows. Plan compositions, drawing format A1 begin in class and work on drawings again in evening

Session three:

Discussion of previous night's drawings- planning and beginning of final portrait of your scarecrow / private protector

Sessions four: working day on final drawing.

Session five: progress crit of drawings up until this point. Continue working in class. Drawings to be finished for and presented for final marking on Monday morning.

UNIT ONE ASSESSMENT CRITERIA

Your presented portfolio will be assessed on the following:

The visual success of the drawings.

Technical proficiency with drawing materials selected

Intelligent, and effective use of mark, tone, texture in the final drawings.

Interesting and a considered use of composition.

Professional and neat presentation of work.

DRAWINGS TO BE PRESENTED

All working drawing from Monday session

The finished single portrait of the scarecrow A2

The physiological interaction drawing between two scarecrows - A2 [finished drawing]

Final drawing 1.5X1M

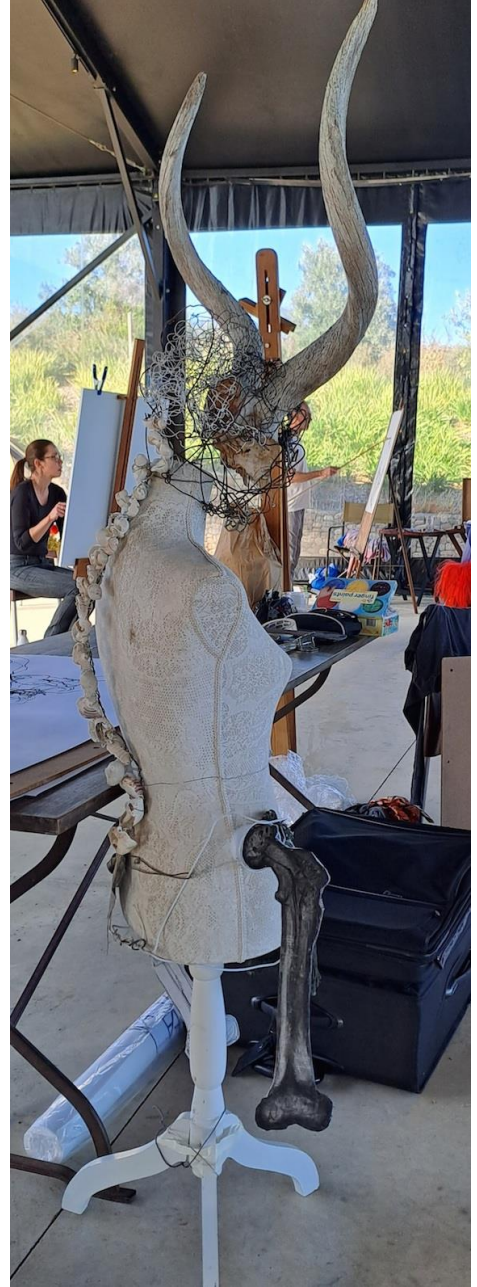

Artists statement in support of your final drawing and its intentions. About 250 words

All drawings need to be professionally and neatly presented.

Supporting ideas and images in your workbook

LEARNING UNIT TWO

TITLE: THE ORDINARY → EXTRAORDINARY

DURATION: 2 WEEKS (including 21 - 22 March: Human Rights Day & Uni Holiday AND Autumn Recess 23 – 31 March)

INTRODUCTION TO & OVERVIEW OF THE UNIT

In this unit you will produce a body of drawings (at least two) which attempts to transform our perception of an ordinary object into something extraordinary. You will use the experiences of the last seven weeks as a template for iterating initial 'ideas' and generating meaningful imagery. The aim of this unit is to create visual ambiguity and to transform an ordinary, mundane object into something unusual, unconventional and surprising. Visual ambiguity must be achieved without losing reference to the object entirely. Consider changes in scale, orientation, cropping, use of unusual materials, explorative modes of drawing and especially the depiction of the object moving in and out of focus when developing your body of drawings. We wish to see many experiments developed in your A5 visual journals.

MATERIALS:

- All suitable coloured drawing materials such as chalks, water-soluble pencils, oil or chalk pastels, etc.
- Two (A1) or three (A2) pieces of good quality paper
- A range of ordinary objects which have the potential for transformation
- A set of three annotated sketches and innovative iterations of possible compositions
- Answers to the worksheet on "Artists and the Extraordinary Image". See Moodle

PROCEDURE:

Preparation:

- Collect a range of mundane objects which you think might be suitable starting points for a set of drawings
- Begin to process possible ideas for the transformation of these objects (no more than three) with a series of annotated sketches and innovative iterations in your A5 journal
- Prepare a set of three possible compositions after having read and understood the associated worksheet on blackboard that guides you to an understanding of appropriate cropping, orientation and compositional unity
- Begin completing the worksheet "Artists and the Extraordinary Image" (on Moodle). This worksheet helps unpack HOW South African artists have explored the extraordinary within a generally mundane set of subjects (figure, still-life, landscape, illustration etc.) and serves to inspire you and offer solutions when approaching your own drawings. Think about ways in which the mundane can be transformed and made your own.

Session one:

- Presentation of THREE possible compositions (See worksheet on Moodle)

Session two:

- Start the drawings. Please note the following important issues to address in this drawing:
 - The final composition consist of EITHER three A2 or two A1 formats
 - The drawings MUST include colour
 - The drawing MUST exploit elements of focal variation. In other words, the final image must explore areas of the objects which are out of focus and move into or through focus
 - The drawing MUST exploit visual ambiguity, i.e. the object must not necessarily be immediately recognisable, but it must not become totally abstract
 - The image drawn including its background elements MUST fill the page and be cropped on all sides of the format
 - See the images below which embody these qualities very well.

Session three:

- Mature the body of drawings at home keeping the above NB issues in mind.

Sessions four - five:

- Group crit
- Finalise the body of drawings
- Assessment will happen in week 9 after the Autumn Recess 23 – 31 March

UNIT ASSESSMENT CRITERIA

This unit will be assessed in the following areas:

- Your worksheet "Artists and the Extraordinary Image"
- Your three possible compositions
- Your iterated ideas and material / media experiments
- Your presented portfolio will be specifically assessed on the following:
 - Appropriate modes of presentation and representation: cropping, focus changes, enlarging etc. which are unexpected, fresh, unconventional and surprising
 - Use of appropriate materials and their combinations in transforming the object visually
 - A dialogue between the various elements of the series (i.e. a sense of belonging to a series, not a group of unrelated drawings on different formats, using different materials etc.)

LEARNING UNIT THREE:

TITLE: THE BOOK ARTS

DURATION: 2 WEEKS – 10 SESSIONS

INTRODUCTION TO & OVERVIEW OF THE UNIT

The artist's book is essentially "the book in the hands of the book form; its materials, shape, size and conventions as constitutive elements to the making of an artist's book that is confident with its materiality and content. An artist's book is not merely a book or journal that contains your drawings and visual ideas; it is, in the words of book theorist Johanna Drucker (The Century of Artists' Books 2007:161), an object which "calls attention to the conventions by which, through constant exposure, a book normally neutralises its identity". In other words an artist's book calls attention to bookness - how a book functions - and deconstructs these conventions so that the object becomes self-conscious and reflexive: an object aware of itself as a book and which plays with and undermines our expectations of a conventional book.

You will be expected to produce a well-crafted artist's book in which the conventions of the book are both understood and undermined / played with, as well as ways in which your content is given meaning. What is important is that the book form must help deliver not simply contain your content.

MATERIALS:

- A5 visual Journal
- Sheets of good quality or hand-made paper
- Other materials which might make suitable pages (plastic, felt etc.)
- An A3 sheet of stiff card (for book covers)
- Water-based glue
- Flat glue brush
- Bradawl (or etching / drypoint needle)
- Strong sewing needle and thread
- Sharp NT cutter
- Steel rule
- Cutting board
- A bone folder / spoon

Thereafter

- Suitable drawing and other physical materials (e.g. for collage purposes) for making your book and which will help deliver your content

PROCEDURE:

Week one – Session One

- Introduction to the book arts: history and form (Jack Ginsberg Centre for Book Arts, Wits University)
- Book-making and binding demonstration
- Production of book ideas and prototypes in which their structure helps to deliver the books' content.

Session two - five:

- Drawing the content of the narrative
- Development of content by means of and through the book form
- Group crit of the following:
 - Maturity of the drawings and their content

Week Two – Session one - five:

- Test book structure and resolving formal issues of binding and handling
- Finalisation of the book's drawings, into appropriate structure and binding
- Presentation of the book for assessment

UNIT ASSESSMENT CRITERIA

Your presented artist's book will be assessed on the following:

- Presentation of a well-crafted book object
- Coherence between book structure and drawn book content
- Compelling drawings which drive the narrative
- Evidence of understanding the conventions of bookness and how these have been manipulated / undermined or deconstructed.

UNIT FOUR: OPEN DRAWING PROJECTS – 1 WEEK

LEARNING COMPONENT: SEMESTER TWO

LEARNING UNIT FIVE

TITLE: LITERARY RESPONSE

DURATION: VACATION WEEKS & 1 WEEK – 5 SESSIONS

INTRODUCTION TO & OVERVIEW OF THE UNIT

This unit aims to explore what visual imagery can represent critical aspects of a particular novel which you will read and respond to in drawing-form during the winter vacation between Terms 2 & 3. The final set of drawings (2 or more panels), will be a development, maturation and resolution of a series of five, small exploratory drawings made in response to the plot and / or character(s) of this novel. The final drawing series must exploit visual metaphors for the plot or an aspect of the plot, or a character or an aspect of one of the protagonists / antagonists, or a relationship between characters.

PROCEDURE

PART ONE:

Over the winter vacation you are to produce a set of 5 A5/4 preparatory drawings which explore metaphors for the plot line or protagonist in ONE of the prescribed books (see list below) which must be read during the 1st weeks of the vacation.

Attention must be paid to the following when producing these small drawings:

- do NOT illustrate the story or a character
- find metaphorical imagery in order to for the plot or an aspect of the plot, or a character or an aspect of one of the protagonists / antagonists, or a relationship between characters
- explore a full range of media and their combinations in which tone and phrasing are important elements in unpacking your metaphors.

PART TWO:

At the start of classes for Term 3, after the winter vacation, you will present your worksheet answers and drawings to the staff. The staff will respond to your answers and drawings, suggesting refinements to your ideas and helping you resolve what the final series of drawings might look like.

PART THREE:

The final drawing must be started at home and completed in the remaining FOUR SESSIONS. The final drawing must develop, mature and resolve one (or a combination) of the 5 drawings completed in relation to the plot / characters in the novel in Part One of the project.

UNIT ASSESSMENT CRITERIA

Your presented portfolio will be assessed on the following:

- your ability to read, understand and respond to a chosen literary text
- successful unpacking of the themes of the book AND
- explanation of the main characters and the plot in a written response
- production of a set of 5 interpretative drawings in which visual metaphor not illustration is evident
- completion of a final drawing series (2 or more panels) that exploit the visual metaphors of the main theme / character of the book.

READING LIST: Read as many books from the list below and then choose ONE for visual interpretation:

LEARNING UNIT SIX

TITLE: FILMIC RESPONSE

DURATION: VACATION WEEKS, RESEARCH WEEK & 1 WEEK – 5 SESSIONS

INTRODUCTION TO & OVERVIEW OF THE UNIT

Similarly to Unit Five, this unit aims to explore image-making as an interpretive response to critical aspects of a selected film which you will view during the winter vacation and the two Research Weeks between Terms II & III. You will develop, mature and resolve a single drawing through a series of exploratory drawings (a min of 5 X A4) made in response to the directorial plot and/or character(s) of this film. This single drawing could exploit a visual metaphor developed in the film or an aspect of the directorial technique (use of light, camera angle, close-up shot etc.) or directorial content (film noir, graphic novel, black-and-white, simultaneity etc.). Alternatively, the drawing could unpack an aspect of the lead (or other) character or an aspect of one of the protagonists / antagonists, or a relationship between characters. What is important is not to simply redraw stills from the film that you like, but to attempt to encapsulate the film's spirit or narrative in a single metaphoric image.

PART ONE:

Task:

Over the winter vacation and Research Weeks you are to produce a set of 5 A4 preparatory drawings which explore metaphors for the plot line, technique or protagonist in ONE of the prescribed films (see list below) which must be viewed during the vacation or Research weeks. NB: Please don't leave this till after, as you will be too busy with Unit Four to do the preparatory work then.

Attention must be paid to the following when producing these small drawings:

- do NOT illustrate the story, filmic technique or a character
- do not simply take stills from the film and reproduce them!
- find metaphorical imagery in order to visually illuminate the plot or an aspect of the plot, filmic technique or a character or an aspect of one of the protagonists / antagonists, or a relationship between characters
- explore a full range of media and their combinations
- as films are temporal, pay attention to the fact that you are to produce ONE final image, NOT a series of images. Thus you are to attempt to collapse the durational and temporal aspects of film into a single drawing. This should be explored in your A5 sketches.

PART TWO:

- At the start of Unit Six (Week 21) you will present your drawings and ideas to the group, individually. The class and staff will respond to your presentation and drawings, help nuance your understanding of the film, suggest refinements to your ideas and help you resolve what the SINGLE final drawing will look like and plot the way forward.
- The final drawing must develop, mature and resolve one (or a combination) of the A5 preparatory drawings completed in relation to the film.
- The final drawing must be completed at home during the Spring Recess.

UNIT ASSESSMENT CRITERIA

Your presented portfolio will be assessed on the following:

- your ability to understand and respond appropriately to a chosen film
- successful unpacking of the themes of the film, main characters and the plot
- production of a set of A5 interpretative drawings in which visual metaphor not illustration is evident: presenting the connotative rather than denotative information visually
- completion of a final SINGLE drawing which exploits the visual metaphors of the main theme / character in the film but is also able to distil the sequential and temporal aspect of film into a SINGLE drawing.

VIEWING LIST:

View as many films from the list below and then choose ONE for visual interpretation:

1. Amélie, Jean-Pierre Jeunet
2. Apocalypse Now, Francis Ford Coppola
3. Atlantics, Mati Diop (Senegal / France)
4. Being John Malkovich, Spike Jonze
5. Birth of a Nation, D.W Griffith
6. Cairo Station, Youssef Chahine (Egypt)
7. Casablanca, Michael Curtiz
8. Cinema Paradiso, Giuseppe Tornatore
9. Citizen Kane, Orson Welles
10. Crash, David Cronenberg
11. Daratt (Dry Season), Mahamat Saleh Haroun (Chad)
12. Drive My Car, Ryusuke Hamaguchi (Japan)
13. Eyimofe (This Is My Desire), Chuko & Arie Esiri (Nigeria)
14. Fitzcarraldo, Werner Herzog
15. Hero, Zhang Yimou
16. Hotel Rwanda, Terry George
17. Keita, The Heritage of the Griot, Dani Kouyaté (Burkina Faso)
18. La Vie sur Terre (Life on Earth) Abderrahmane Sissako (Mauritania)

LEARNING UNIT SEVEN

TITLE: 3RD YEAR PASSPORT DRAWING

DURATION: 2 WEEKS – 10 SESSIONS

INTRODUCTION/OVERVIEW TO THE UNIT

This unit aims to establish potential themes, content and processes which you might seriously consider for further exploration in 3rd year. It allows for you to extract elements, motifs and concepts explored during 2nd year drawing and pursue possible themes, concepts and processes which you might want to take forward in 3rd year in order to produce a body of self-generated works. Your drawing or body of drawings will need to demonstrate both technical excellence and conceptual rigour; worthy of continuation, development and maturity. Consider this drawing your 'entrance' assessment piece into your final year of your degree studies.

MATERIALS:

- A5 journal
- Substrate material - as required for the drawing's content
- All possible dry and wet drawing materials
- Other materials suitable to the drawing's content

TASK

Complete a drawing or body of drawings in which a particular and personal theme is identified and rigorously researched in your A5 journal. On completion of the drawing you should feel confident to continue this theme into your 3rd year.

UNIT ASSESSMENT CRITERIA

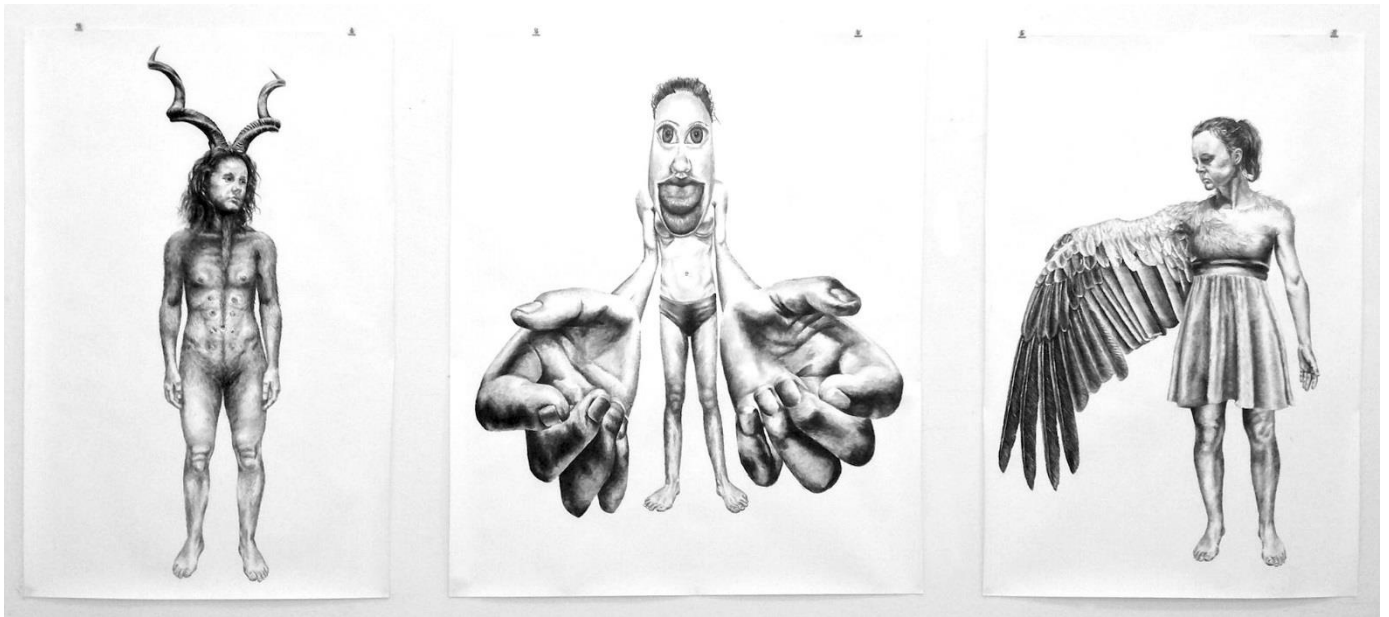

Your presented final drawing(s) will be assessed on the following:

- completion of a drawing or series of drawings generated from your own research, interests and themes in such a manner as to make your content area clear to the viewer
- embodiment of all your learning during the year
- demonstration of outstanding technical mastery
- demonstration of strong conceptual rigor
- this drawing is clearly the strongest most visually compelling work you have completed this year and would comfortably pass at the start of 3rd year!
- accompany the drawing(s) with a compelling body of research and resource materials
- An artist's statement

In addition to these compelling signs of excellence you must also:

- convince the staff that this theme or direction is worthy of further study
- convince the staff that you are ready for the expectations and challenges of 3rd year drawing
